

Symposium on Presidential Campaign Politics For Kansas High School Social Studies Teachers

This symposium will focus on the current presidential campaign with a special emphasis on how teachers can get students involved in the upcoming election.

Topics will include the presidential and Vice-presidential debates and how students can get involved through "Debate Watch", polling, campaign finance reforms, 527s and other issues related to the election.

Presenters will include current political leaders, University of Kansas political science professors, and experienced classroom government teachers. This Dole Institute will offer a program rich in content and practical information that can be used immediately in the high school history or government course.
